Et tout s'évanouit, vaste aspect, bruit sublime... —
Quel est ce projectile inouï de l'abîme ?
Ô boulets monstrueux qui sont des univers !

Dans un éloignement nocturne,
Roule avec un râle effrayant
Quelque épouvantable Saturne
Tournant son anneau flamboyant ;
La braise en pleut comme d'un crible ;
Jean de Patmos, l'esprit terrible,
Vit en songe cet astre horrible
Et tomba presque évanoui ;
Car, rêvant sa noire épopée,
Il crut, d'éclairs enveloppée,
Voir fuir une roue, échappée
Au sombre char d'Adonaï !

Et, par instants encor, — tout va-t-il se dissoudre ?—
Parmi ces mondes, fauve, accourant à grand bruit,
Une comète aux crins de flamme, aux yeux de foudre,
Surgit, et les regarde, et, blême, approche et luit ;
Puis s'évade en hurlant, pâle et surnaturelle,
Traînant sa chevelure éparse derrière elle,
Comme une Canidie affreuse qui s'enfuit.

Quelques-uns de ces globes meurent ;
Dans le semoun et le mistral
Leurs mers sanglotent, leurs flots pleurent ;
Leur flanc crache un brasier central.
Sphères par la neige engourdies,
Ils ont d'étranges maladies,
Pestes, déluges, incendies,
Tremblements profonds et fréquents ;
Leur propre abîme les consume ;
Leur haleine flamboie et fume ;
On entend de loin dans leur brume
La toux lugubre des volcans.
